

MILLIONAIRE SHATTERS FACTORY GIRL'S DREAM OF WEALTH—NOW HE FACES SHAMEFUL SUIT

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 20.—Had she but a chance to live her young life over again, she says, millions could not lure her.

But in a case like her's there is never a chance to "live it over again." So Nellie Storle, a Tacoma factory girl, has placed a price of $100,000 upon her honor, and ways and the wealthy man of the world.

The girl first knew Hogan in the spring and summer of 1908. Hogan left Tacoma for Toronto that fall, but kept up a correspondence with her, she says in her complaint, during the 15 months he was absent.

Nellie Storle.

has asked the U. S. district court to collect the money.

Frederick Hogan, a millionaire manufacturer of Toronto, Canada, is the man she demands shall pay this price.

The story Nellie tells in her complaint is the same old story, the pretty factory girl with her braid of hair and sweet, innocent

As she bent over her work, sewing seams in overalls 10 hours a day, she would dream of the fairy prince who had come into her life. Surely the Gods had sent him. He was so good, so true and so tender in his affection. Her mother had always said her pretty face and figure would be her fortune some day, and now it
